Session: Methods in Migration Research

Open MIS-Understandings

Debate Series to promote interdisciplinary exchange on central concepts of migration research

The Open MIS-Understandings is a multilingual series

The next Open MIS-Understanding session is dedicated to methods and methodological issues. Although migration research is becoming increasingly differentiated depending on the epistemological focus, an increased interest in qualitative methods can be observed. Linked to this are questions about the role of the research subject, practiced research ethics, participatory approaches or the (innovative) use of media. These and other aspects of current migration research will be discussed by the invited guests from the social sciences and cultural studies.

SPEAKERS AND DISCUSSANTS

Karolina Barglowski
